

AMEICO

Modern Forms. Traditional Japanese Craft.

The Asano Lamp brand is rooted in the traditional lantern-making craft of Gifu Prefecture, Japan — a region known for handmade washi paper lighting. Founded in 1917, the company has spent more than a century refining techniques using bamboo structures and washi paper.

The brand became especially recognized through the “Paper Moon” series designed by Japanese designer Shigeru Uchida in 1990, blending traditional craftsmanship with minimalist contemporary design and helping introduce Japanese paper lighting to an international design audience.

Today, Asano lamps are still handmade in Gifu using traditional methods, valued for their sculptural forms, soft ambient light, and balance of Japanese craftsmanship and modern simplicity. The lamps are often grouped together as sculptural lighting installations or used individually as soft architectural accent lighting.

HIBIT PENDANT LAMP

The Asano Hibit Washi Pendant Lamp is a handcrafted Japanese paper lantern renowned for its meditative geometry and warm, sculptural glow. Made by Asano Shoten in the Gifu prefecture of Japan, the design relies on a continuous spiral of natural bamboo filament ribbing wrapped around a wire armature, layered over with panels of thin, traditional Washi rice paper. It ships flat-packed and unfolds gracefully when installed.
